A telegram which I am empayed and propping that God may have from New York, published in the Weekly Alta of November 8, gives some particulars of the arrangement. This states that the mail will leave London, January 10, to meet the first steamer leaving San Francisco about the end of that month. New Zealand joins Sydney in this no the cases John L. Turns is no use in attempting to disguise the fact that intense disappointment and mortification have followed the announcement made on Wednesday last that the government had decided to abandon the nogotiations for a reciprocity treaty on the basis of a cession of Pearl River. We candidly believe that nine-tenths of the foreign population on this group really favor the measure, and that the few mischief-makers who opposed it did so either with the view of benefit-Lanama ing themselves personally, or out of pure mischief and for the sake of opposition. Whatever may have been the real causes which compelled a change of base on the part of the Ministry, against its conviction of sound policy, the result all must deeply regret. It throws a blight over the hopes of planters struggling under a load of debt which for years they have been hoping to see lightened, and dampens the arder of those just emberking in new agricultural enterprises, as well as of all who are engaged in mercantile persuits or are in any way connected with our agricultural prosperity. Unless the native population can be led to see the folly of listening Hite to those who have so grossly deceived them, there is little use of hoping for reciprocity in feture, on any terms whatever.

The Common Sense View of It.

Looking at what we believed to be the true interests of this country, we have earnestly adthe United States, and have deprecated the opposition which has been raised to it on account of the concession of Pearl River for a naval station, and have recommended that judgment whether the United States Government declined to entertain the subject or not, when it could with more propriety have been laid before the few partisans against the administration, have chiefs and natives to such a degree as to compel it to abandon the policy which it had adopted, one could desire to see so important a measure carried into effect, against the strong opposition troubles which still continue in the Eastern of even a minority, nor do we think that the United States would wish to see it accomplished under any such circumstances. Early after General Schofield's visit in January, the subject was brought forward, and the fact that all previous efforts had only resulted in failure, on account of its not being a reciprocal measure, it was suggested that Pearl Harbor, entirely useless to us, might help to secure the treaty. Before the Government had considered the measure, Mr. Phillips uttered a violent blast against the proposition, which he excited the native population to no good purpose. The foreign element, led by the Chamber of Commerce, spurred the government to adopt, risily changed, except to develop the strength of without delay, some measure which would lead to embrace the cession of Pearl River. Our law does not recognize such contracts, and all precedent is against enforcing foreign contracts against the person; even contracts of apprenticeship made in England or Canada become voidable if the parties enter the United States. The elaborate opinion of the Chief Justice, dissenting from his associates, failed particularly in considering the question of policy where our law allows no discretion, and in the inapplicability of his authorities. The facts of loss to ship owners, and of efforts on shore to reach the coolies on board, are mere incidental circumstances and do not affect the legal rights of coolies. It is a mistake to compare this case under the statutes with proceedings in admiralty, or equity, the simple question being, what is the law ? And the work being to execute it when ascertained. The idea that foreigners have no right to be heard in our courts if their cases might involve us in diplomatic trouble, would apply equally to all foreigners residing here. The case quoted from Curtis applies expressly " to the absence of proper legislation." That from Cranch, referring to men of war, is under international law, and the | Cases Lard, in 5 and 10lb. tins, others are cases in equity or admiralty, or under special statutes.

It is the glory and comfort of our age that the right of habeas corpus is so universally established, that not only is it within the reach of every man, but it has become the standard of civil liberty, by which all other political claims and assumptions of right are measured and approved or condemned, according as they attain to or fall below its firm and simple assurance of personal freedom.
